TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 9.

THE FOREIGN NEWS shows rather a sudden "clouding up" of affairs in Europe, and a consequent disturbance of business and financial matters in England and France especially This, at once, has had its effect on this side of the Atlantic. Gold advanced yesterday 3 per ct. Although the cable accounts may be exaggerated, there is evidently enough "in the wind" to make people uneasy.

The Richmond papers record the particulars of an altercation between Mr. Joseph Segar and Mr. James, the collector of Internal Revenue in Richmond, which ended in Mr. James being collared, "choked gently" and threatened to be stripped for search by Mr. Segar, for not giving back to him. It is said that Gov. Peirpoint will be nomi nated by his friends for next Governor of Virginia; and that Mr. Hunnicutt will, also, be a candidate. Gov. P.'s friends are already throwing out intimations, that unless the Conservatives who can vote, support Gov. P., Hunnicutt will be "the man." They would fain limit the choice to these tico, and take the chances! We shall see, by and by, more of this matter.

There was a large meeting of colored men at Gordonsville, Va., on the 6th inst., which was addressed by Hunnicutt, and radical resolutions adopted. W. P. Lucas, a colored man, was deputed to represent the meeting at the Radical Convention to be held in Richmond, on the 17th instant. .

The Boston Post remarks that while "Mr. Summer is prating about the duty of the South to educate its people we hear never a word of apology for his vote repealing the act giving public lands for educational purposes to all the States, so far as the Southern States are concerned."

General Schofield, commanding in Virginia, has issued an order directing that all vacancies occurring in office before the holding of a convention shall only be filled by persons who have never taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States.

Fort Phil, Koarney Massacre. The Helena (Montana) Herald of March 7 contains the following account of the Fort Phil. Kearney massacre, as furnished to some white men by Indians who were engaged themselves

They (the Sioux) were about two thousand strong, all warriors, without their families with them, reaching a deep gully or ravine near the fort. The main body of the Indians were stationed on the opposite side of the defile, lying close to the ground so as not to be seen, while they sent a small number of their best riders up near to the post, where the Government borses and mules were loose, and to stampede them.

he commander of the post sent out about ninety men and officers to pursue the Indians and recover, if possible, the lost stock, The retiring small hand of Indians went slow enough to encourage their pursuit, and led their pursuers into the narrow defile. The trap was successful in every particular. After the little command of troops had fairly entered the deep canon, the Indians lining the sides of the mountain on either side, raised and fired a volley of arrows and bullets, killing on the spot all but seventeen of the soldiers and every officer. These seventeen, though a number of them were wounded, the Indians say, fought bravely, and killed some fifteen or twenty of their number, among them the principal chief, before they were shot down. But there was one of the brave boys in blue whom neither their arrows nor bullets would fell, though he had numberless wounds. He stepped up and fought hand-to-hand till overwhelmed by their closing in upon him and carrying him off a prisoner to their camp, where he was finally tortured to death. The savages say that, aside from the force, lining the fatal defiles, they stationed six hundred of their picked young worriors near the post, so as to make sure of its capture in case the troops remaining within should be sent out to the relief of their comrades. But this was not done, although they could plainly hear firing from the post.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April S.—Gov. Worth, of North Carolina, and Gov. Orr have been in consultation with Gen. Sickles here for a few days past, concerning the nature of the general orders to be issued for the government of the second military district. Their conference has been harmonious, and Gov. Worth, on his return to Raleigh, will urge his State to reorganize promptly ucder the provisions of the Sherman act. Renewed efforts are in progress to stimulate immigration. Gov. He was in the United States Senate in the day of the giants, and yet even then both Henry Clay and Daniel Webster openly spoke of Mr. Evans as the best financial authority on the whig side. As a debater, his masterly grasp of the subject in hand, and his clear, terse language, will long be remembered by all who enjoyed the privilege of listening to him. On the dissolution of the whig party Mr. Evans joined the democracy, with whom he continued to act for the remainder of his days.

He, the messenger, or whoever he was, requested me to inform Wirz of this. In presence of Father Boyle I told Wirz next morning what had happened. The Captain simply and quietly replied . "Mr. Schade, you know that I have always told you that I do not know anything about Jefferson Davis. He had no connection with me as to what was done at Andersonville. If I knew anything of him I would not become a traitor against him or anybody else, even to save my sea, and to the northward, great whales are life." IN VIRGINIA, and indeed throughout the Southern States, the garden and orchard have been generally neglected. We do not mean that there have been no gardens or orchards, but that they have not received due attention. As for orchards, it has been the custom after planting them out to leave them to the tender mercies of unassis ed nature. Here and there a few thoughtful farmers have bestowed the needful attention upon them, and in all such instances have been amply rewarded. The garden, upon whose varied products the com fort of every household so much depends, has never received that care and attention which it deserves. It is not easy to estimate the economic and hygicaic value of a well-man aged garden. While the head of the house hold is busy with farming operations he almost forgets the orehard and the garden. They are generally left to the mistress, who finds it difficult to get them properly attended to. In every well regulated country establishment there should be one regular garden laborer. When not thus engaged he could find ample employment in the farm crops.-Those living in cities and towns can, by proper attention to their gardens, save half of their table expenses, and, in addition, feed a cow with the surplus vegetables and garbage .-They have the opportunity also of raising fruit trees and vines, which will supply the choicest luxuries of the table. Moments now wasted could be most pleasantly and profitably em ployed in their culture, -Richmond Whig.

THE SHORT DRESS, -The New York Times ave that the introduction of the short dress attended with considerable embarrassment. Ladies fear ridicule, and imagine that it will have but a brief run, even if should come into general use. The short dress is not so very short as to offend the taste or the scruples of the most fastidious. It simply dispenses with superfluous length, thereby enabling woman to make some other use of her hands than holding her dress out of the dirt and mud. It sub serves cleanliness, for the most disgusting of all sights is that of a long dress after a walk upon muddy streets. It also removes the extra weight from the waist, which has herefore been so destructive of female health. In short, with the thick soled boots that are coming into vogue, the short dress is sensible in every point of view.
